February 2020 – Luke Alsobrook

It is with great pleasure Military Matters shines our February #ProBonoSpotlight on Luke Alsobrook, founder of The Alsobrook Law Firm. Since signing up last year he has helped many veterans and military service members resolve their legal issues and gain a new outlook on life. Luke truly enjoys helping anyone he can and shared, “First time offenders just made a bad choice at the wrong time. I take satisfaction in assuaging people’s fears when they’re facing the worst spot they’ve been in.”

Luke has never served in the military, but his grandparents were in the Army, his father and father-in-law were in the Marine Corps, and his brother-in-law has the unique duty of piloting Air Force 2. He has great appreciation for those who have served - whether drafted or volunteered - and Military Matters allows him to use his skills to give back and say thank you. He is involved with the Volunteer Attorney Project and his family spends time giving back together with Harvesters.

In summers during college, Luke was part of an asphalt crew in Texas working sun up to sun down all over the state. He said, “That experience definitely taught me to stay in school and study hard!” Luke became an attorney because of the respect he had for them growing up. “It truly is a noble profession and a lot of what we do is trying to help people,” he explained.

When he’s not in the courtroom Luke and his family enjoy camping. Recently they had the unique experience to travel to Bentonville and stayed in a yurt. They enjoyed the experience and he said, “It’s really just another form of glamping (glamorous camping).” He also plays golf and disclosed he isn’t very good currently, but has plans to practice more as time allows.
